“July was another strong month for sales of single-family homes and condominiums,” said Julie Meier, president of the Honolulu Board of REALTORS®. “Median sales prices for homes and condos did not quite reach record highs, but still showed healthy gains year-over-year. However, it is noteworthy that the average days on market for homes and condos was up a bit in July, which indicates inventory is increasing. This is great news for the market, where demand continues to outpace supply. Overall, sales are right in line with what we expected for this time of year, and are indicative of a very healthy housing market.”

The public is encouraged to visit www.hicentral.com to see what’s happening in the housing market. The public has the ability to search through Oahu single-family home and condominium listings, available for sale and for rent, and to see a comprehensive guide of homes that will be open to visit this Sunday. All searches can be done by geographic location, price range or both. The site also provides useful information about buying and selling real estate in Hawaii.
